What do YOU think the US dollar, the world's reserve currency, will do? Will the Fed raise rates? If so, will that drive the dollar higher, as many market analysts predict? Or do you see "competitive devaluations" in our future?

If not to the US dollar, where will global liquidity flow? To the Eurocurrency? The pound? Or those two commodity currencies, the Canadian and Australian dollars? Will it flee to the historically safe haven of the Swiss franc? Or does one invest in Asia via the Japanese yen --- or the recently strong New Zealand dollar? How about the Mexican peso?

The global foreign exchange market is enormous, and currency movements offer incredible opportunities. Plus, the timing and direction of those movements affect and are affected by ALL markets ---interest rates, exportable grains, metals, energies!
